A: I was able to get the recommended/required software to work on my machine. It turns out my virtual box was not able to run Windows XP on the guest operating system. Once I updated the virtual box to version 3.2.8, I was able to install it. However I am disappointed that I am unable to get those updates for virtual box 3.2.8. I tried downloading from the website but there was no update available for my current version. Here's the link to the download: The reason for this bug report is so that I can give an adequate review. The use of radiopharmaceuticals for diagnosis and treatment of cancers has recently received significant attention. Generally, the use of radiopharmaceuticals in cancer diagnosis and treatment is similar to the use of radiopharmaceuticals in pain management. One widely used radiopharmaceutical in cancer diagnosis and pain management is technetium-99m methylene diphosphonate ((99m)Tc MDP). The radiopharmaceutical is a complex of technetium-99m with a diphosphonate group, and is comprised of the cationic complex of technetium with a bifunctional organic chelator, commonly methylenediphosphonic acid (MDP). Because of the short half-life of radioisotopes, including (99m)Tc, it is usually necessary to use the agent soon after its production. The use of (99m)Tc MDP, however, is limited to hospitals and clinics that have access to on-site generators. Also, (99m)Tc
